DETAILED ACTION

1. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
2. Claims 1-16 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as containing subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention for the reasons of record set forth in Paragraph 2 of the Office Action mailed May 29, 2002 (Paper No. 5).
3. Applicant's arguments filed August 29, 2001 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In reference to rejection of claims 1-16 under 35 USC §112, first paragraph as not enabling applicants mainly argue that the Examiner has inappropriately shifted the burden to the applicants to show why a particular phenomena occurs. It is not a requirement of patentability that an inventor correctly set forth, or even know, how or why the invention works. Applicants believe that the higher tear strength in machine direction (i.e. direction of orientation) than the transverse direction is achieved in the multilayer film having at least two layers composed of different kinds of resin and the orientation of a multilayer film is carried at a temperature higher than low melting point resin and lower than higher melting point resin. Which results in a multilayer film the layer formed of high melting point resin orients and the layer of low melting point remains as unoriented.

These arguments are unpersuasive because the Examiner has not inappropriately shifted the burden to the applicants to show why a particular phenomena occurs. The Examiner has provided evidence showing what is well established phenomena is. In the instant disclosure the process of making an unidirectionally oriented multilayer film is commonly known method. There is no where in the specification shown criticality of orienting a multilayer film of different kinds of resin at a temperature above the lowest melting point resin and below higher melting point resin. Furthermore as evidence show that monoaxially oriented film (or layer) has lower tear strength in the direction of orientation compared to transverse direction. The unoriented layer or film expected to have tear strength equal in every direction. Thus in a multilayer film wherein one layer is monoaxially oriented and other layer is not oriented expected to have lower tear strength in the direction of orientation compared to transverse direction because the oriented layer will have higher tear strength in the transverse direction and unoriented layer has tear strength equal in all direction. In addition the monoaxially oriented multilayer film wherein one layer is oriented and other is not as analogous to the wood. The wood has tear strength lower in the length direction compared to the tear strength in the transverse direction since wood fibers are aligned in the length direction and lignin holds wood fibers together is analogous to the unoriented layer. For this reason wood easily splits in length direction.

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
